

Sam Brodman. They made many inquiries of her about Abolition, but she poor soul could tell them nothing. Mr & Mrs Brodman she said had a long discussion between themselves about Garrison. Mr & Mrs Wright - he was just - the man have earned a dollar". I have 25 subscribers now - Ably has 8 & those are 5 more than she can manage. Poor thing I pity her. I hardly think she will be here another winter.

The anti-slavery business here is rather dull. Would you believe it, the young men of the society went about - talking of Mr May's coming, & where he was to lecture, and where, & applied to all the churches for admission & when it came to the point not one of them could give a reason for expecting him. Upon finding at the bottom of the matter, no one had sent for him. The Female Society here is struggling on & will I hope come to something. I was in hopes that the matter respecting the coloured people would have been fully settled, but no one came to the last meeting but Mrs Rich and Johnson & as she is rich & respectable & pretty white the finish of the game has not come. It will next meeting when 11 coloured women are going to join. They are in a considerable trouble about a vice-president, if no New Bedford person who is suitable can be got, would you take the office if you were me? I may have to withdraw, for next meeting I know the battle will be fought. Suppose you write a letter to them, merely opening the correspondence & using great swelling words. Charlotte is very ill. She is too weak now to do any thing. Dr Bartlett thinks she will recover, & she thinks she shall herself I believe. She certainly fails every week. This New Bedford air I believe is the vilest in the world. I have had a cold, and during the whole of it I have made the same kind of a cough that yours was. I was much disappointed at not having you come here, but I had almost given up your coming before I received your letter.

and I'll try to get Mrs & the right not. Mrs Grinnell told me I wanted Mrs & the right not.

Monday evening. I am going to do this letter up & send it by the stage to-morrow, along with the petition if it comes in to-night, if it does not I shall put it into the mail. If the petition does not come to-morrow it will on Thursday. Charlotte is too ill to write any thing, but Susan Baker, Susan's sister will. I saw her to-night and she sent her love to you. They are real quakers, there to use no slave labour, I am invited to take tea there this week. Last ~~Monday~~ night I took tea at a Mrs James Gannells, whose sister comes to school to me. The Charles's & the Roberts's were there. I had considerable talk with Mrs Roberts. She is certainly a very accomplished woman, but - but I think a very intellectual one. She said so much about my coming to hear her husband preach that Sunday afternoon I went, but Mr Gould of Fairhaven preached. I enjoyed it very much it seemed so like Weymouth, he is a real Perkinsite. It had a very quieting effect on my mind. Wednesday Mrs Sally had a beautiful dish of baked apples and I invited her to tea. She had free labour cake on my arrival. When we all went to the coloured school. Thursday Abby I took tea at the Marrison house. Henry Lee was there and acknowledged a prejudice against Garrison. I beat him out of considerable of it. I intend to clear him of the rest. Henry Lee tried to prove that Mr Emerson had the same feeling, but as he denied the charge stoutly, we are bound to believe him. Friday I staid at home all the evening & read the "slave". I liked it extremely. But I am free to say that I think it rather insurrectionary. World's people can find no fault with it, I should think. Saturday the meeting of our society took place, after which I called at Mr Wilsons and had a real row with them, he knows all the brethren, and particularly Garrison who converted him at Lynn. & he was president of the first anti-slavery society formed there soon after the formation of the New England. He read me a letter from Orange Scott who also will not be able to come to the 4 days meeting as was expected. She is to be in Boston the 25th. From there I went to Mrs Ben Bradman's. She was very civil to invited you & me to call in Boston. They are to be at Mrs Mellish's I think in Phillips's Place. Do call, for they have been very civil to me. I wish Maria would call too. I think they would like it very much. From there I went to Aunt Sally's, she is all kindness to me.

Monday evening. I am going to do this letter up & send it by the stage to-morrow, along with the petition if it comes in to-night, if it does not I shall put it into the mail. If the petition does not come to-morrow it will on Thursday. Charlotte is too ill to write any thing, but Susan Baker, Susan's sister will. I saw her to-night and she sent her love to you. They are real quakers, there to use no slave labour, I am invited to take tea there this week. Last ~~Monday~~ night I took tea at a Mrs James Gannells, whose sister comes to school to me. The Charles's & the Roberts's were there. I had considerable talk with Mrs Roberts. She is certainly a very accomplished woman, but - but I think a very intellectual one. She said so much about my coming to hear her husband preach that Sunday afternoon I went, but Mr Gould of Fairhaven preached. I enjoyed it very much it seemed so like Weymouth, he is a real Perkinsite. It had a very quieting effect on my mind. Wednesday Mrs Sally had a beautiful dish of baked apples and I invited her to tea. She had free labour cake on my arrival. When we all went to the coloured school. Thursday Abby I took tea at the Marrison house. Henry Lee was there and acknowledged a prejudice against Garrison. I beat him out of considerable of it. I intend to clear him of the rest. Henry Lee tried to prove that Mr Emerson had the same feeling, but as he denied the charge stoutly, we are bound to believe him. Friday I staid at home all the evening & read the "slave". I liked it extremely. But I am free to say that I think it rather insurrectionary. World's people can find no fault with it, I should think. Saturday the meeting of our society took place, after which I called at Mr Wilsons and had a real row with them, he knows all the brethren, and particularly Garrison who converted him at Lynn. & he was president of the first anti-slavery society formed there soon after the formation of the New England. He read me a letter from Orange Scott who also will not be able to come to the 4 days meeting as was expected. She is to be in Boston the 25th. From there I went to Mrs Ben Bradman's. She was very civil to invited you & me to call in Boston. They are to be at Mrs Mellish's I think in Phillips's Place. Do call, for they have been very civil to me. I wish Maria would call too. I think they would like it very much. From there I went to Aunt Sally's, she is all kindness to me.

ask Knapp why he does not send the B. copies of the Liberator which Joseph Congdon sent for, & what is more paid for more than 3 weeks ago.

I hope he will come next Tuesday. There has been a great hall here A. B. & I were invited but we both declined

10

Miss Anne Warner Weston.
H. G. Chapman & Co.
Boston.
Mass.

Delena Weston
Jan 15 - 1836

Monday. Got no answer when you have got 3 letters from me
Mr Charles, one by Mr Clark, & one by appleton. Do not set me know to go home yet then. & set me know by the stage Friday or Saturday.
for some time I feel melancholy. I want sympathy. I called upon Louisa Channing to night & she presented me with Bazaar works she found together. She gave other things. Mrs Stearns and another forms. She & Channing will bring the same. Mrs Stearns is dead.
Mrs Knapp does not mind it at all.

Ms. A. 9. 2. 2. 6